REMEMBRANCE—Fragrant and soft the summer wind doth blow,
Weary I lie, with heavy half-shut eyes,
And watch, while wistful thoughts within me rise,
The curtain idly swaying to and fro.

There comes a sound of household toll from far,
A woeen murmur; voices shrill and sweet,
Clapping of doors, and restless moving feet;
And tokens faint of fret, and noise, and jar.
Without, the broad earth shimmers in the glare,
Through the clear noon high rides the blazing sun,
The birds are hushed; the cricket's chirp alone
With tremulous music cleaves the drowsy air.

I think—"Past the gray rocks the wavelets run;
The gold-brown seaweed drapes the ragged ledge,
And brooding, silent, at the water's edge,
The white gull sitteth, shining in the sun."

Large Attendance at W. H. M. S. Meeting

There was a large attendance at the W. H. M. S. of the M. E. church, Thursday afternoon. They met at the home of Mrs. Herbert Scott and the house was well filled. It was the Christmas meeting and there was a Christmas tree all lighted up and the Christmas gifts which were to be sent to the Mitchell Home, N. C. There was a splendid program and those who were not there missed a rare treat. Miss Callie Morgan had charge of devotions. Mrs. Lumsden gave the lesson from the study book in a very interesting and instructive manner. Mrs. Hobbs and Miss Laing also had a part on the program. Mrs. Carlson gave a beautiful Christmas story of "Why the Chimes Rang," and last, but not least, Mr. Carlson favored with a solo, "Ivory Palaces." Everyone enjoys his singing and we are always glad to have him on the program.

BY CYNTHIA GREY

One of the most tragic of human experiences is when a woman, in becoming too good a mother, becomes an indifferent wife and eventually loses her husband's love.

Recently such a case came to my attention. Two people married young, and the baby came the first year. He had to dig into business. She had to take care of the home and cook the meals as well as be on 24-hour duty with the baby.

Before the mother was released from the tyranny of constant physical care of the first child, another baby came. Then another. When the woman had been married six years there were three children.

Now another mother knows that taking care of three babies without any help except a laundress isn't an easy job. And it isn't any wonder that this mother often was too tired in the evening to be charming and vi-cacious to her husband. He often was tired, too.

But the difference was that all the time he really was getting ahead in his profession and was developing mentally. His wife was swamped with housework and babies and she was getting lines in her face and didn't look as smart as she used to. She didn't have much bright conversation to spring.

Danger in Offing.

And neither of them realized the danger. They were very much in love and very much interested in their home and children. And they were so busy and so poor in those first years they didn't have much time to be sorry for themselves, or to plan pleasures they couldn't afford.

Eventually he grew prosperous, a highly successful architect. She became more and more devoted to her children and more absorbed in their needs and their growing up.

She didn't mind when he started going out without her, because she was so engrossed in her children. Eventually it happened. He met a charming and beautiful woman who was cultivated and highly artistic, and who appreciated his work. Quite innocently at first, they started a friendship that eventually became too strong for them to resist.

He left his wife and asked her to divorce him, so he might marry the woman he had grown to love. And this was the first time his wife realized that she had lost her husband. Then it was too late. The mischief was done.

The interesting part of this is that the woman who acted the innocent role of villainess was not an obvious, cheap, vamp type at all. She would not for worlds have broken up a home if she had realized at the start what she was doing. She simply furnished this man the inspiration and the mental companionship he needed in his mature years and in his success, just as his wife had satisfied his emotional needs years before.

Who's to Blame?

We can't say who was to blame in the unfortunate triangle. Our sympathy goes out to the first wife and mother, the one who suffered most. Yet we cannot entirely excuse her from blame. She did neglect her husband for her children—because she saw their needs and she did not see his. She didn't realize he needed a wife as well as a mother for his youngsters.

The husband wasn't a villain. He was just human, and was a victim of human frailties.

After the smash has occurred, we all can see how it happened, and why it happened as it did, though there is nothing anyone else can do—except be warned by it.

Love, sentiment, and the aesthetic side of marriage do not flourish without cultivation. No matter how devoted she may be to her children, a wife still has a responsibility as a wife and companion.

When she stops being her husband's pal, there is grave danger that some other woman will fill the role.

THE RAILROAD-CANAL PROBLEM.

Senator Gooding of Idaho is still gunning for the railroads. At the last session of congress he got a bill through the senate for settlement of the long and short haul railroad freight rate issue. But in the house it was swamped in the last hour rush. The senator is going to press the bill early in the house this time. Just how is this issue to be settled and at the same time live up to the congressional policy of "fostering and preserving in full vigor both rail and water transportation?" As now the trans-Mississippi and inter-mountain area is bitterly complaining of the high short-haul rail rates. If these rates are scaled down to be on a mileage basis as compared to the Pacific coast rates then shippers can have no complaint to make, but that would be death on the railroads. If Pacific coast rates are scaled up to be on a par per mile with mountain rates, then the whole Pacific coast would rise up in arms, and California would just about have to go out of business. Just where to find a middle ground and settle the matter to the satisfaction of every one without killing off the railroads, that's the real problem. For it must be conceded that the country needs the railroads. It would have taken centuries of "covered wagon" transportation to have developed the central and the far west.

Nevertheless there is basis for Senator Gooding's complaint. He cites the fact that the railroads by fixing rates put river boats out of business years ago and now are in the way of obliterating the value of the Panama canal on which the government spent nearly half a billion dollars. The method is by making through rates by the railroads cheaper than by the Panama route, and charging it up to inland points, which must pay far out of proportion to Pacific coast rates. He gives one illustration: It now costs $1.58 per hundred to ship dry goods from Chicago to San Francisco and all other Pacific coast cities. The $1.58 rate from Chicago is also charged to every point west of a line drawn midway through the Dakotas, Nebraska, Kansas and on to the gulf. The railroad application before the interstate commerce commission asks a rate of $1.10 to San Francisco without charging the rate at intermediate points. In other words, Ogallala, Neb., 820 miles from Chicago, is asked to continue to pay $1.58, while the rate to San Francisco, 2261 miles, would be cut to $1.10. Scranton, Ia., 376 miles from Chicago, would pay $1.10, the same as San Francisco for its haul of 2261 miles. The $1.58 rate to Ogallala earns 77c per car mile. The proposed $1.10 rate to San Francisco would earn 19.4 cents per car mile.

Time is coming doubtless, as the west develops in growth and population when there will be plenty of business for both the canal and the railroads. But in the meantime high freight rates will be sure to slow up the rate of business and population growth. What's the answer?

RECREATION AT GENEVA.

Viscount Cecil has announced that he intends to use part of the money awarded him last year by the Woodrow Wilson Foundation for his peace activities, to enlarge the tennis courts and golf course and to augment the library of the league of nations. Recreation facilities are not always easy to find at moderate cost at Geneva, and Lord Robert apparently feels that they play an important part in maintaining the spirit of good will among the nations' representatives.

Just as the German and French delegates to the Locarno conference helped themselves to a better understanding of each other's aims by their little private social hour at the inn, so many other delegates with seemingly conflicting points of view may be brought together while striding across the Geneva golf course of contesting a point at tennis.

The Englishman's sportsmanship has sometimes been credited with his military successes. Is a time coming when wars will not be won on the fields of Eton but will be prevented on the playgrounds of Geneva?

BELATED STATISTICS.

An official department in Ontario has just issued an important pamphlet entitled "Statistical Review of Ontario's Mineral Industry in 1922," and the Toronto Globe rises to inquire why "in the name of all that is enterprising" a really valuable document of this sort should be issued three years late.

Many an editor and other citizen on this side of the border has had occasion to wonder similarly about interesting and valuable pamphlets and statistics issued by various departments of our own government. Some of them are published promptly so that they may be of use. Others come out so tardily that the facts they record and summarize have grown old and stale and are fit only to be tucked away in dusty files, possibly never again to see the light of day.

This is a place where red tape ought to be eliminated and government departmental machinery speeded up a little.

QUEER WEATHER.

California won great fame some years ago by the peculiar nature of its fires. There was a San Francisco fire, you may remember, that made great cracks in the earth and toppled tall building down in a manner strangely like an earthquake.

Now it's Florida's turn. Miami, we read, spent a day in a semi-submerged condition, with water in the cellars and with people going to work in bathing suits.

We haven't heard yet what caused it. Not a rain, of course. Probably it was a leaky faucet.

TEA FOR THREE

"How do you do," he said pleasantly.

"Has Mother come back yet?" asked Nancy when the Twins and Mister Blue Cap reached the picture gallery again.

The little fairman looked carefully in every direction. "No, sir! She's not here yet," he exclaimed. "What do you know about that? I thought she would be here long ago—wondering where in the world you children had gone."

"I suppose she couldn't get the correct telephone number," said Nancy, "and it's been her waiting."

"Well," said Nick, "we have had a jolly time while she was gone, anyway, haven't we?"

"My, yes," answered Nancy. "It is too bad we can't—"

But Mister Blue Cap interrupted her suddenly. "Well, if I didn't go and forget! I never thought of it until this minute, but it's not too late yet if we hurry. You have an invitation to tea."

"Good!" said Nick who was always willing to eat. "Let's go."

"Now Nick!" begged Nancy. "Please behave your manners and don't act like a greedy pig! I thought you had all you could hold when we went to the fair."

"Oh, ho, ho, indeed no!" said Nick. "Fair nothing! I'm as empty as a drum again. But I'll be good and not stuff down all the cakes and not break any dishes."

"Come along, then," said Mister Blue Cap, leading the way to a fine big picture painted in lovely colors, that looked almost good enough to eat.

It was called "The Balcony," the picture was. It was an old balcony overhanging a lovely garden. On it

THE HANGING

LETTER FROM MRS. MARY ALDEN PRESCOTT TO LESLIE PRESCOTT—CONTINUED

Now, a complication has entered into your home. You have just got rid of the pearls and something more ominous seems to be bearing down on you. I am sure that Paula Perier is making a dead set at John and I think that Mrs. Atherton is coming with the whole business. Just why Miss Perier should have picked out my son when it looks as though she could have any unattached man in America, is something I cannot explain, except by the fact that she is not only a very designing woman but a very wicked one.

She comes to the house every day with Mrs. Atherton. She goes directly to the nursery and either stays there until Mrs. Atherton gets through her business with Jack—something quiet, of which I do not approve—or else she takes Hannah and the children for a long ride, returning just in time to pick up Mrs. Atherton at noon.

I asked Hannah the other day if you had given permission for her to take the children out. She answered, "Mrs. Prescott has done so, Madame."

Of course I do not know whether she is telling the truth or not, for John has been so busy with Mrs. Atherton, the doctors and nursing for the last few days that I've hated to disturb him. I do not think that John has seen Miss Perier here at the house yet, but you know she was with him when he had the accident. But I am sure she is laying her plans to see him in the nursery was a table set for three. From the balcony one could see a distant hill, on which there was a city.

No one was on the balcony—indeed no one was in the picture at all. And yet Mister Blue Cap went right up the magic steps that suddenly appeared before it, and unlocked the glass door.

As it swung out to allow the Twins to enter, a young man came around the corner of the balcony, where he had been hidden from view behind a curtain, and held out his hand.

"How do you do," he said pleasantly. "I was afraid you were not coming to see me. I told my friend, Blue Cap, not to forget to bring you here, if you had time."

He shook hands graciously with them both, and pulled out one of the little chairs for Nancy to sit down.

That young lady seemed to have lost her tongue all at once, for all she could do was to scramble up on her chair and answer nothing at all.

Nick was almost as bad, for he couldn't think of a thing. The young man had to do all the talking. He spoke of the weather, and other things, but all the Twins could do was to unfold their napkins and sit quite still.

Suddenly Nick remarked, "I thought we were to have tea with a lady. I didn't know men ever gave tea parties."

"So that is the trouble, is it?" asked the young man, laughing merrily. "Perhaps it seems strange to you in America, but we are not in America now. We are in one of my castles. I am a prince."

(Copyright, 1925, NEA Service, Inc.)

In the near future. A woman never looks so fascinating as when she has a child in her arms, especially if she is as beautiful as Miss Perier. Yesterday afternoon I heard someone talking in the children's room and knowing that Hannah was out at the moment, I softly opened the door and stepped in. Much to my consternation and surprise I found Miss Perier with little Jack on her lap. I could see that Sydney was asleep in his little bed. I knew that she did not see me, for I had opened the door from the hall that has the

Gifts

The appropriate Christmas gift frequently seems unattainable, like the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. And the more extended the search, the harder it sometimes becomes—the vast variety of suggestions, each one good in itself, confusing rather than clearing the mind.

There is a way, however, to find an appropriate gift for every person on your Christmas list, and to do it with a reasonable expenditure of time, energy and money. Confine your efforts to a store specializing in gift goods which experience proves the great majority of people appreciate, a store known for quality and moderate prices, a store where all the Christmas offerings are displayed together in a compact space.

Your local Rexall Store meets these requirements so uniquely that it is frequently called "Gift Headquarters" by the Christmas shoppers who have discovered, and benefited from, its unusual advantages.

After 12 years' suffering with constipation, Kellogg's ALL-BRAN brought lasting relief

Florida woman
feels ten years younger. Nomore headaches or medicine.

Think what it means to be everlastingly free from the dull, throbbing headaches, sallow skin and perpetual tiredness which are constipation's toll. But let Mrs. Bevis tell you her inspiring story:
Words can't express my gratitude for Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. For 12 years I suffered with constipation, always taking medicine, had dull headaches and never felt well. For the past 12 months
I've eaten ALL-BRAN and haven't taken one drop of medicine. I've gained in weight, my health is so improved I feel 10 years younger.
(Signed) Mrs. P. S. Bevis,
Jacksonville, Florida.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN will bring sure relief to you just as it has to
Mrs. Bevis and thousands of others.
It is a bulk food that doctors recommend. It is guaranteed to be permanently effective, if eaten regularly, or the purchase price will be returned by your grocer. Only ALL-BRAN brings sure relief.
Eat at least two tablespoonfuls daily—in chronic cases, with every meal. Try the recipes given on the package. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is nature's own way of cleaning the intestine. Made in Battle Creek, Mich. Served at leading hotels and restaurants. Sold by all grocers.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agents for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

Use Coke for Home Heating

Save 25% on Your Coke Bills.
No Dust, Smoke or Gas and Few Ashes

By-product coke is fast revolutionizing the household fuel problem and it is confidently predicted by Government Experts that the day is fast approaching when coke will replace other household fuels both in the furnace and for cooking. Many bakers use it in preference to hard coal for their ovens.

As soon as people use coke in a furnace, they never go back to dirty, wasteful hard or soft coal. The Government has issued pamphlets by the thousands in the past ten years urging people to use this clean, economical fuel.

The best of all by-product coke is known by the trade name of "QUICK FIRE COKE," made by the Indiana Coke & Gas Company of Terre Haute, Indiana. They issue an interesting booklet telling about coke and its use and "How to burn it." They send it to any householder free on request, and give names of dealers who handle this famous brand of coke.

Insert upon having "QUICK FIRE COKE." If the dealer in your town will not supply you with "QUICK FIRE COKE," take no other, for none other is so good. Write us and we will tell you how to get it and save money on your next coal bill.

Chocolate Eclair

"FELLOWS, if you have had the idea that the Chocolate Eclair is a 'ladies' cookie' then you have another guess coming. It's an all-round cookie for everybody."

You can't get away from the palate appeal of that slim, strip of honey-cake, ridged high with fluffy, delicious marshmallow creme.

Take this combination, enrobe it in true chocolate—and that's Johnston's Chocolate Eclair.

If Friend Wife has overlooked laying in a stock of Eclairs, stop in at the corner grocer's yourself, and treat the family.

SYNOPSIS

Bing Carrington finds himself at David Lacy's farmhouse on Long Island. To his amazement he discovers Connemara Moore and her Aunt Celimena also are there. So, too, is Sweetie, a mysterious young woman whom Connie met aboard a yacht. Connemara was to have announced her engagement last night—to Bing or Salt Adams—but, instead, stole away from Aunt Celimena's Connecticut home. It was a night of wild adventure for all of them.

CHAPTER XVI—Continued

"Things have happened so rapidly, so confusingly," began Aunt Celimena, "I don't know which way to turn."

"This way," advised Sweetie, pointing to the hall. "You turn right around this way to go straight upstairs; eyes left. Join me and you won't be seen by the world. Pretty slick, that, eh? I'll have to jot it down and sell it to the Marines."

"Tell it to the Marines is the way the saying goes," nuzzled Aunt Celimena, following Sweetie to the door.

"I know it but you can't tell the Marines anything, ma'am, and you can sell them the Pacific Ocean."

Left alone with Connemara, Bing at once proceeded to press his suit—or, rather, it was Mr. Merrill's suit, Connie, turning crimson, pushed him away. She had caught a glimpse of Lacy approaching from the hallway.

"Oh, I say, Connie," protested Bing. "We're all alone now. We're engaged, aren't we? Didn't you—"

"We are not engaged," she broke in quickly. Lacy was enter-

"Well," began Bing, resignedly, and forthwith related the experiences of the night. He had seated himself in a morris chair some distance away. At the conclusion of his story he urged Connemara to tell him everything that had happened to her.

She arose. "No, Bing; I will tell it all to you when I have more time. I have work to do now. I must clear myself in Mr. Lacy's eyes. He believes I am mixed up in some way with that gang of smugglers. I cannot rest until I have placed that fifty thousand dollars in Mr. Bob Merrill's hands to be turned over to the government!"

"Fifty thousand what?" gasped Bing, as she started to leave the room.

"Bones," replied Lacy, following her. "I hid the money down on the beach," she explained, hurriedly, "near the house where that funny-looking Bugle lives."

"I'll go with you, Connie," said Bing, springing to his feet. Stupefaction had held him rooted to the chair.

"See here, Carrington," said Lacy, surveying the late arrival with a critical, even pitying air; "you can't go running about in that awful suit of clothes. You're a sight, old man. I'll tell you what. We're about the same size. I'll fit you out with a suit of mine. Don't go yet, please," to Connemara. "I'll be down in a minute or two and we'll go to the beach together while Mr. Carrington is changing his clothes. It's too far for you to walk there and back, so I'll get the roadster. We can park it at the Merrills' and cut through their place to the beach. By the way, you can use my razors too, Carrington, if you like. You certainly need a shave. So don't hurry. Take all the time you like. No doubt you'd like a bath. You—"

"I had a bath last night," said Bing surlily.

"The more the merrier," quoth the sparkling-eyed Lacy, slapping the other on the back. Then, grasping his arm, he hurried him upstairs, but not without a look of appeal to the girl below.

In an incredibly short space of time he rejoined her and they set out for the beach. But it was not until they had left the little green roadster in the Merrills' drive, and were on their way down to the water that either of them spoke.

"I've never forgotten you," Lacy said then, softly and abruptly, out of that long silence. "Ever since the day in Auteuil your face has haunted me. I've thought of nothing else. In my dreams—"

"Do you think I belong to the Swede's gang?" she interrupted darkly.

"Good heavens, no! You couldn't! You are an angel. Listen! I swear to you, Connemara, I've been in love with you ever since the day I first saw you. I've—"

"Hush! You mustn't say such things to me."

"You are blushing! And how lovely you are when the color spreads over—Oh, I say! By George! It has just occurred to me that you may think I am mixed up in this smuggling business. For Heaven's sake, you—you don't think that, do you?" He stopped short. His eyes were troubled.

"Of course I don't. How stupid of you!"

"Well, then, I repeat, I've been in love with you for months, Connemara. I—I wonder if you remember meeting me over there in France. I don't suppose I made the slightest impression on you then but—"

"I remember you very well," she interrupted demurely. "I have an excellent memory. Will it please you if I say I have never forgotten you, Mr. Lacy?"

He gulped. Then, in rather a daze: "And you are not in love with that chap back there or—with anyone else?"

She smiled. "Don't hurry me so," she murmured. "Oh," she cried, in sudden confusion, and with no little relief, "there is the beach. Down there is where I hid the money. Come on, Mr. Lacy. We mustn't waste any time."

"I am trying not to," he exclaimed, as he hurried along after her flying figure. "Wait a second! Answer me, Connemara. Do you—do you love me?"

BARBARA HAWLEY, 25, after teaching school three years, decides to go into newspaper work in order to see life.

When her fiancé, BRUCE REYNOLDS, objects, she breaks with him and gets a job on the Chicago Telegraph, which ANDREW McDERMOTT, a close friend of her father, before his death, is managing editor.

During her first day at the office, Barbara gets a name wrong, publishing a story that MORRIS PATTINHAM is dead. Pattinham threatens to sue her and Barbara gets her first taste of the nerve-racking responsibilities of her work.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER IV

THE black-browed giant burst into volubility. "What you think becomes of my business after you've called me dead?"

Pattinham stopped a moment for breath, while Barbara turned over several answers in her mind and found none worth making.

The city editor was staring at her white face.

He turned a conciliating eye toward the man. "Well, Mr. Pattinham, it was unfortunate that Miss Hawley should have made that mistake. She has not been doing this work very long. It wasn't intentional."

"I'll tell you what we'll do. We'll publish a correction tomorrow. How will that do? Make things even?"

Pattinham beamed. "Fine," he said, baring large white teeth. "And you can say second-hand stoves and old rugs are my specialty."

Wells bowed the visitor out and turned to Barbara. "You see what names mean to a newspaper, Miss Hawley," he said. "If we had said the wrong man was sent to an insane asylum or had committed a murder, it might not have been so easy to rescue his 'business'."

Barbara, though relieved, was still speechless with shame. She was not quite sure what her mistake had been, but she could not bring herself to ask.

"The man who died spelled his name with a 'k'," said Wells, with a note of weariness in his voice. "I'm sorry," said Barbara. A heavy fatigue was creeping over her body, deadening her nerves and tangling her thoughts so that she could not trust herself to speak, not knowing what incoherence might issue from her lips.

Wells looked at her face and turned abruptly away.

Over in the wire news corner, Bob Jeffries was watching her from behind a paper. He saw that something was decidedly wrong. For a moment he hesitated. Just then Barbara flung her head back, blinked her eyes and strode manfully toward her desk.

There she gathered up her purse and gloves and looked around for her hat. In a moment Bob was by her side. "Going home?" he asked nonchalantly. "I've a rattle-trap bus outside that will roll just as well as a Mercedes, if you aren't proud."

Barbara favored him with a smile, all the brighter for the tears trembling just behind it. "Of course I'm not proud," she answered. "But I live too far—clear out in Evanston. Thank you just the same."

Bob shrugged. "What's the distance to a car like mine? I could land you at Timbuctoo, if you could land the word. Come on."

Outside, Barbara found his haphazard racing car parked at a dead angle. She crept in, her heart beating. She felt that the tears she had shed were not wasted.

"You might as well learn right now that I'm in journalism because only a small mistake and I made it because the office was so noisy I simply could not get it right over the telephone, no matter how hard I tried. So I just had to guess at it. And a terrible old man came in and said he would sue the Telegraph, or something."

Bob whistled. Then he laughed. "Wow! not so bad, for the first day on the street. What happened?"

When Barbara had told him, he became more serious. "
